DAYTON, Ohio, September 14, 1971 ---- The University of Dayton's Department of Theological Studies and Religion in Life are presenting the third in a series on "Foundations in Theology." The program will attempt to acquaint the interested layman and the religious educator with some of the contemporary theological issues. The series begins on Tuesday, October 5, 1971 and will run for a nine-week period. There will be one four-week session in October and two four-week sessions in November with one class meeting on December 2.

Interested parties may participate by enrolling in 1) a full course running eight weeks, or 2) one of the four-week periods. If the participant enrolls for the full eight-week course, the cost will be six dollars. If he elects to enroll in a four-week section, the cost will be four dollars per section. All meetings will be in Miriam Hall 102 from 8:00-10:00 p.m.

The first section will deal with "Issues in Environmental Ethics." The instructor will be Professor Harold Fox, Assistant Professor, Science and Religion, University of Dayton. This section will meet on October 5, 12, 19, and 26.

The second section under Professor Richard Boulet, Associate Professor of Theology and Ethics, University of Dayton, will deal with "Contemporary Issues in Ecclesiology." It will meet on November 9, 16, 23, and 30.

The third section, "The Relevance of Theology, instructed by Professor William P. Anderson, Assistant Professor of Theology and Ethics, University of Dayton, will meet on November 4, 11, 18, and December 2.
